Galathea
2004. Design: Jan Armgardt

Simplicity characterises the designs from Jan Armgardt. With an aversion to frills, in his designs user comfort prevails. Besides, for those who love beautiful details there is always plenty to enjoy. Go and sit in the Galathea and when sitting in this neat little armchair take note of the exceptional stitching on the upper edge of the arm and (when standing) in the back. A variety of different feet make it possible for you to finish off the Galathea to your taste; modern with light carriage slides, homely with walnut wooden feet or mobile on castors.

Galathea from Leolux is in every way a typical Armgardt: sober, beautiful and comfortable, united in one armchair of modest dimensions.

- Galathea is available as an armchair.
- This armchair is available with curved stainless steel tubular carriage slides, with walnut feet or with castors.

Galathea originates from Greek mythology. Her admirer, the Cyclops Polyphemus, murders her beloved shepherd Akis with a boulder, from which she has a fountain spring.
